How a Lean Vermonter Gained Eight Pounds in Nine and a Half Hours. VERGENNES, VT., November 21 .- On Wednesday evening a wager was laid between William Laduke, of Vergennes, and Messrs. Forton & La Bombord, as follows: Laduke day morning the gourmand began his task by eating five apples. He then ate one pound of pork-steak, two large potatoes, one slice of bread, onc-quarter of a pie, one-eighth pound of butter, and drank one cup of tea. The remainder of the forenoon of which he had devoured twenty-three at 12 o'clock, At noon he ate one pound of pork-steak, two large potatoes, one-quarter of a pie, one slice of bread, one-eighth pound of butter, and drank two cups of tea. He was then weighed and found to have gained seven and one-balf pounds. For the next three hours he averaged about two apples per Lour. At 5 P. M. he ate the last apple and won the bet with half an hour to spare. His weight when he began was 145 pounds, and at the close 153 pounds, showing a gain of eight pounds in nine and one-half hours. Seven and one-half pounds of this be acquired in the first five hours, the last five hours adding only one-half pound to his weight. The half bushel of apples was "heaping' measure, and numbered just sixty-five apples. Laduke is 26 years old, five feet seven inches in height, and has never experienced a sick day in his life. He is a thin, spare man, and has always worked out for his living, usually among the farmers. He experienced no unusual difficulty from his square meal, and offered to bet $5 that he could eat another peck of apples the same evening.

An Actress' Dilemma.

[From the San Francisco News Letter.] Visitors to the Standard Theatre on S day night were disappointed to observe that, although Miss Alice Harrison's name appeared on the programme, that charming little dramatic cocktail failed to present herself on the boards. A rumor that she was seriously indisposed at the Palace Hotel was generally accepted as an explanation. The cold facts of the case, however are these: While the clever young actress was descending from her room, in the elevator, on her way to the theatre, that evening, the man who runs that machine thoughtlessly stepped off for a second at one of the landings without completely stopping its movement. The result was that it continued to descend, with Miss H. as the sole occupant. It is supposed that she became alarmed and endeavored to stop the machinery in some way. At all events, the cage became motionless between two of the floors, and still remains there stationary as we go to press. The machinery has got out of gear some how, and the only mechanic who understands it lives in New York; he has been telegraphed for and passed Omaha yesterday, coming out on a special express train. Meanwhile no communication can be had with the imprisoned star, and her only sustenance has, since Tuesday, been pea-soup and other liquids, forced through the rubber tube that supplies the elevator with gas. The whole affair has cast a gloom over the hotel. Telegrams and other expressions of concern are pouring in from all quarters. We hope Miss Harrison will come out all right in the end, but confess it looks doubtful. After this we suggest that the elevators be provided with six months' canned provisions and a life-preserver apiece.

President Lincoln's Humanity.

[From the Mt. Sterling (Ky.) Democrat ] General Green Clay Smith, who is holding a protracted meeting at the Baptist church in this city, favored us with a call Wednesday morning. Noticing the motto over our desk, "With malice toward none and charity for all," he remarked that the Democrat had appropriated a Republican declaration. "But," said he, "it is a noble sentiment. While I was in Congress, during four years, I had frequent interviews with President Lincoln, and never, during all that time, did I hear him utter an unkind sentiment. I was old by Secretary Stanton that at the first Cabinet meeting after the surrender, the question as to what should be done with the Confederate leaders was under discussion. Some of the Cabinet were for hanging, some for imprisonment, and so on. During the discussion the President sat at the end of the table, with his legs twisted up, and said not a word. At last some one appealed to him for his views. The President's reply was: . Gentlemen, there has been blood enough spilled; not another drop shall be shed, if I can help it.' Said Mr. Stanton: 'This reply was like a thunderbolt thrown into the Cabinet, and not a word of opposition was offered." A man who could use such language as that at such a time could truly subscribe himself "with malice toward none and charity for all."

"Yes," observed a friend the other evening, "she certainly is very highly cultivated. She is very stylish, plays well, sings well, talks well, dances well, and rides well, and succeeds admirably in private theatricals. In fact," he added, "she's just the kind of a girl you'd like one of your friends to marry." "Then you wouldn't care to marry her?" suggested Causuer. "By no means, my dear fellow.
